The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hellbaum in view of Nakamura or vice versa.

Hellbaum (figs. 2-5) teaches providing a warped or curved piezoelectric actuator via placing a plastic layer #14 on piezo layer #12 and allowing the different coefficient of expansion to deform the piezo during the manufacturing process. Hellbaum (col. 4 lines 22-38) teaches the piezoelectric portion can be made up of multiple electrode and laminated layers. Hellbaum does not show any housing for the device. However to be incorporated into any useable device, some sort of housing or mounting would obviously be necessary. Nakamura (figs. 1, 4-6 and 8-10) teaches the specific housing is known per se. It has ease of manufacturing advantages as well as providing environmental protection. Thus for at least these reasons it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide Hellbaum with a housing as taught by Nakamura. Conversely, Nakamura teaches the acoustic piezoelectric device comprising a laminated piezo actuator (figs 2 and 3) located in the specific claimed housing. Nakamura does not provide a warped or curved transducer surface. However, Hellbaum teaches that provide a thin piezoelectric actuator with a curved surface increases output displacement. Thus, for at least this reason, one of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to provide the piezo laminate of Nakamrua with a warped or curved shape.
